Here's an acronym referenced using `\acr`: hyper-text markup language (html). And here it is again: html. If you're used to the `glossaries` package, note the difference in using `\gls`: hyper-text markup language (html). And again (no difference): hyper-text markup language (html).

Here are some more entries:

extensible markup language (xml) and cascading style sheet (css). Next use: xml and css. Full form: extensible markup language (xml) and cascading style sheet (css).

Reset again. Start with a capital. Hyper-text markup language (html). Next: Html. Full: Hyper-text markup language (html).

Prefer capitals? Extensible markup language (XML). Next: XML. Full: extensible markup language (XML).

Prefer small-caps? Cascading style sheet (css). Next: css. Full: cascading style sheet (css).

A set (denoted $\mathcal{S}$) is a collection of objects. The universal set is the set of everything. The empty set contains no elements. The cardinality of a set (denoted $|\mathcal{S}|$) is the number of elements in the set.

A glossary is a useful addition to any technical document, although a glossary can also simply be a collection of glosses, which is another thing entirely. Some documents have multiple glossaries. Entries in a glossary or index have an associated page list.

A bravo is a cry of approval (plural bravos) but a bravo can also be a hired ruffian or killer (plural bravoes).

Resetting all acronyms.

Here are the acronyms again:

Hyper-text markup language (HTML), extensible markup language (XML) and cascading style sheet (CSS).

Next use: HTML, XML and CSS.

Full form: Hyper-text markup language (HTML), extensible markup language (XML) and cascading style sheet (CSS).

Provide your own link text: style sheet.
